I am a certified Physics nerd and an amateur forensic scientist with a keen interest in solving interesting and challenging problems. Over the years, I've worked as a data analyst, software tester, test automation engineer, DevOps engineer and ML consultant for several companies, in areas ranging from market research to fiber optic telecommunications and mobility. Currently, I work as a DevOps engineer and ML consultant at the Siemens Lisbon Tech Hub, while pursuing a PhD degree in Cognitive Science at Universidade de Lisboa. My research focuses on the application of ML algorithms to improve the performance of EEG-based brain-computer interfaces.
